Dr. Ryan Davison works with the American Chemical Society advocating legislature that supports the chemical sciences. His strong scientific background allows him to personally highlight the importance of scientific research in front of members of Congress. Dr. Davison’s talk will focus on a general political update on the current dynamics/dysfunction on Capitol Hill, a specific political update about the members of Congress and committees that most affect science and research, and a legislative update about recent/current bills in Congress most relevant to chemists and researchers.

A sign-in sheet will be available for use in fulfilling the weekly seminar requirement.
