

The Ph.D. Career Planning Series Presents:

ARUN DIVAKARUNI: Scientific Communication: Building Bridges Between Science and Business

A PhD CAREER PLANNING SEMINAR

- What is scientific communication? Why do companies and scientists need to be good at it?
- How are social and digital media changing the public conversation on science and medicine?
- How can you start a career in scientific communication?

Arun Divakaruni, Ph.D.
Vice President of Scientific
Communication, Weber Shandwick
UCLA Alumnus

April 19th

Friday, 12:00 – 1:00PM

CNSI Auditorium

RSVP

Space is limited!

RSVP link:

<http://scientificcommunication.eventbrite.com>

- Dr. Divakaruni is Vice President of Scientific Communications at Weber Shandwick, a leading public relations firm. He advises and develops communications programs for a range of biopharmaceutical clients aimed at a variety of audiences.
- He graduated with his doctorate in Biochemistry and Molecular Biology from UCLA.

The Ph.D. Career Planning Series is a collaborative project of:

- Academic Services, UCLA Graduate Division •
- The California NanoSystems Institute (CNSI) • The Society of Postdoctoral Scholars at UCLA •
- David Geffen School of Medicine, Office of Postdoctoral Affairs in the Biosciences •